

ATLASES AND MAPS

Newton atlases and maps serve to address a wide range of social, economic, environmental and informational needs. A map of Newton printed in 1700 is a plan of the town, showing roads, property owner names and land holdings, as well as the geography of the area. An 1874 atlas by F.W. Beers shows the streets of Newton and displays the shape of the houses on the land. A small map included in the Collection of Material on Nonantum shows the shrinkage of the privately owned Silver Lake from its magnificent state in 1874 to its almost puddle like size in 1971. While a 1990 map by the United States Federal Emergency Management Agency shows the city's streets and areas of flooding.
